

Higher Education Policy Researcher Summer 2021

About the Organization

Research for Action (RFA) is an independent, non-profit educational research organization with a mission of using research to achieve equitable educational opportunities and outcomes to help inform better policy and practice decisions. With three decades of experience, our work is designed to strengthen public schools and postsecondary institutions; provide research-based recommendations to policymakers, practitioners and the public at the local, state and national levels; and enrich the civic and community dialogue about public education.

Summary

Research for Action (RFA) is seeking a full-time higher education policy researcher to contribute to RFA's substantial body of research and evaluation work focused on state policies and programs designed to advance equity in college access and success in both the two-year and four-year sectors. Our current portfolio of mixed-methods research studies spans topics including college pipeline programs based in K-12; academic coaching and mentoring programs for community college students; statewide and local College Promise (i.e. free college) campaigns; state higher education funding formulas; developmental education reforms; initiatives for engaging adult learners; policies for credentialing experiential learning; and efforts for closing racial attainment gaps in higher education.

Job Qualifications

- Master's degree in a relevant field such as education, higher education, or public policy; Ph.D. preferred
- Advanced research training in qualitative, quantitative, or mixed methods
- 5+ years experience designing and conducting rigorous applied research studies, policy, and program evaluations.
- Demonstrated experience collaborating with state policymakers, program developers, funders, and intermediaries in the field to identify and examine policy solutions that support student movement into and through college
- Experience working with or studying the experiences of students of color, low-income students, adult learners, and higher education institutions
- Demonstrated ability to contribute to and enhance our team's equity-focused practices in research design, data collection, analysis, and reporting
- Project management experience, especially managing complex projects with multiple external stakeholders and aggressive timelines
- Strong interpersonal and collaboration skills, including ability to work with team members on projects and ease at building rapport with clients and colleagues with diverse backgrounds
- Strong written and oral communication skills to engage audiences that include academics, policymakers, community members, and practitioners

- Ability to work independently, with limited direction, as well as within a team environment.
- Fluency in Spanish preferred to support the development of research instruments and conducting interviews.
